AUTHORITY

This study was requested by the Deputy Director of Security (PPS) and Chief, Physical Security Division.

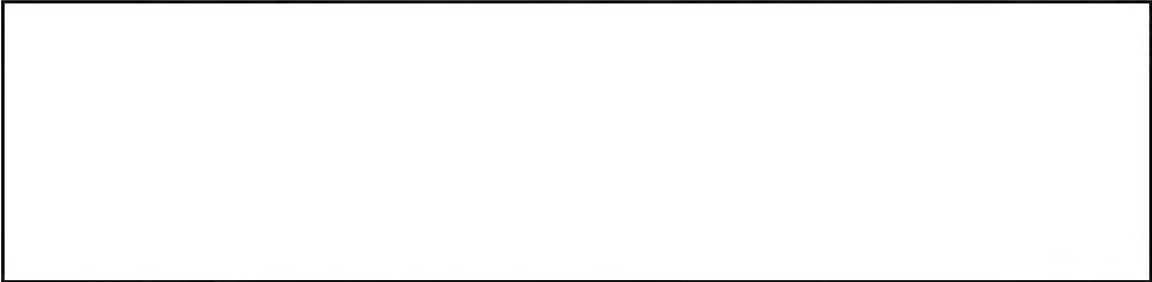

FINDINGS

In order to provide adequate service for the transmission of mail and material within Central Intelligence Agency and for transmission of outgoing mail and material to other Government agencies, CIA Regulation  provides that the Director of Logistics will maintain a Mail and Courier Branch.

GENERAL CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The courier activities within Central Intelligence Agency appear to be providing adequate delivery service with a minimum loss of material. When the large volume of items handled is taken into consideration and compared against the small number of security discrepancies, it is felt that the various courier systems are performing their duties in accordance with applicable security regulations.
